Criminal Justice Reform and Human Rights: Recent Trends

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

OHCHR is part of the Secretariat of the United Nations and is led by the High Commissioner for Human Rights, a position created in 1993. It collaborates with an ever wider range of actors, including Governments, national human rights institutions (NHRIs), non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and other civil society actors, to instil as broad a commitment to human rights as possible.

As the United Nations principal human rights official, the High Commissioner acts as a moral authority and a voice for victims. The High Commissioner guides the Office’s mission and values, identifies its priorities, and drives its activities. The High Commissioner makes public statements and appeals on human rights situations and crises; engages in dialogue with Governments to strengthen national human rights protection; and travels widely to ensure that human rights messages are heard in all parts of the world, to listen to those whose rights have been denied and to engage with duty bearers.

The High Commissioner works to mainstream human rights standards throughout all United Nations programmes to ensure that peace and security, development, and human rights—the three essential pillars of the United Nations system—are interlinked and mutually reinforcing, and that human rights form the bedrock of all United Nations activities.

OHCHR work and activities

OHCHR seeks the implementation of human rights standards in the daily lives of all people everywhere. Working towards this goal, it collaborates with Governments, parliaments, judicial authorities, police and prison officials, NHRIs, NGOs and a broad range of other civil society actors, in addition to United Nations partners, to build awareness of and respect for human rights. OHCHR empowers individuals to claim their rights and assists States in upholding their human rights obligations.

Local, national and international human rights NGOs are a vital part of the international human rights movement and an essential partner for OHCHR. They alert the world to human rights violations. They defend victims, promote rights through education, and campaign for improvements and advancements. The relationship between OHCHR and civil society is a dynamic and collaborative one, which infuses all parts of OHCHR.

OHCHR areas of work span the full spectrum of human rights. Each activity is interrelated and complementary, and forms an integral part of its mission. Its thematic work identifies and targets gaps in the existing human rights system, leading protection and research and addressing contemporary issues, such as climate change and gender-based violence, from within a human rights framework.

In its standard-setting work, OHCHR contributes to the development of new international norms to advance human rights protection and entitlement. Its monitoring work aims to ensure that these standards are implemented in practice and thus contributes to making human rights a reality. Through its work on implementation in the field, OHCHR looks for early warning signs of human rights crises and deteriorating situations, offering technical assistance to Governments and ready to deploy staff and resources when crises develop. OHCHR also works to increase human rights education and awareness. It seeks to empower people to access their rights and, by using United Nations human rights bodies and mechanisms effectively, to become agents of change.

OHCHR activities are funded from the United Nations regular budget and from voluntary contributions from Member States, intergovernmental organizations, foundations and individuals.
Correctional and Rehabilitation Centres Department

The department of correction and rehabilitation centres was established on 1/1/1986. The purpose for establishing the department was to supervise the work of the rehabilitation centers which affiliated to the police directorates in the geographic areas of responsibility and were no more than few centers at the time. The work of the department developed as the legal requirements changed and developed. There were two changes in the legal framework for the department, the 2001 and 2004 correction codes. These changes came to enhance the application of a human rights approach to the management of the centers and the rehabilitation process in general. The work of the department has developed immensely since 1986 and many projects have been accomplished. The number of centers reached 15 spread over the geographic area of the kingdom. And there has been a shift in the approach of managing the rehabilitation process from merely keeping the inmate in the centers to developing an environment that supports the rehabilitation of the inmates, this environment includes health care facilities, suitable quarters, social care facilities, facilities to sustain and maintain contact with the outside world, playgrounds and yards, facilities for vocational training and workshops to provide the inmates with a source of living. The department continues to develop its work keeping in the back of its head an ultimate goal of implementing the international standards of human rights and others valid standards in the area of rehabilitation and correction of inmate.

One of the main proposes of the rehabilitation and correctional programs in our centers is to release a productive citizens who can be of more benefit to themselves and the society in general. The CRCD is keen to participate annually in such exhibitions as a part of its activities to show the benefits given to the inmates through vocational training in the CRCs on professions that reflects positively on their financial status after their release. The CRCD participation in this exhibition contains hand crafts of ceramics, beads, needlework, furniture, blacksmith and metal productions, handicrafts and fine arts. All produced by males and females inmates who received their vocational training inside the CRCs by professional experts in those fields.

Establishment of the CRC Training Center

In August of 2008, the Director of Public Security issued a decision to establish a center for training and development of Correction and Rehabilitation Centers (CRCs). The center’s duties include training the staff of CRCs on the latest curricula and training programs and supervising the development programs and projects of CRCs, as well as maintaining the international cooperation and coordination with relevant organizations in this field, Bringing the total number of trainees in the training and development center since its establishment till 01.03.2014 A total of (6873) Trainee.

Accompanying and post release care for Correction and Rehabilitation inmates:

The definition: it’s defined as the care acquired by the inmate during his incarceration (accompanying) and post his release to facilitate his integration to society and to provide him with all means to follow a path away from crime, taking care of his family, provide him with a mean of earning his financial needs to keep him away from crime. According to article 30 of the correction code number 9 for the year 2004 that the responsibility of the post care is exhaustively upon the ministry of social development, nevertheless local entities interested in inmate welfare can assist. As for the accompanying care, the CRCD is providing it through correctional, vocational, psychological and academic services all inside the CRC before his release to mitigate the impact and the stigma of his release and to provide him with a legal profession to avoid reoffending.

Due to the great importance of post care and looking forward to develop the services provided to inmates the CRCD established a section responsible for the post release care for inmates to serve as a focal point between the accompanying care efforts inside the CRCD in coordination with other stakeholders including the ministry of social development and other local entities and international organizations interested in inmate post release care.

Following this effort and as a prototype inmates in the first moments of their release were provided with moral and financial support, some of them were provided with jobs in coordination with local enterprises others were given small loans to start legal income generating projects. A total of 30 male and female inmates benefited from this pilot project as a beginning and efforts are in process with stake holders to widen this umbrella to include more numbers of inmates.
