

Mission Permanente du Royaume du Maroc à Genève

TRANSPARENCY INTERNATIONAL
the global coalition against corruption

Corruption and human rights in detention

Tuesday 23 June 2015, 13hr – 14.30, Palais des Nations, Room XXIII

‘It is largely accepted that there is a need to link anti-corruption measures with the realization and protection of human rights. What is missing at this stage, however, is strategies to translate the substantive linkage into concrete measures.’

Advisory Committee to the Human Rights Council

At this side-event the Advisory Committee’s report on corruption and human rights will be presented. Expert panelists will discuss what corruption means in practice, focusing on prisons where the phenomenon thrives and significantly impacts on human rights, and explore how human rights mechanisms can more effectively address the impact of corruption on the protection of human rights.

English-French interpretation and sandwiches and refreshments provided.

Welcome address

H.E. Ambassador Mohamed Auajjar,
Permanent Representative of Morocco to the UN

Advisory Committee’s report on the issue of the negative impact of corruption on the enjoyment of human rights

Katharina Pabel, Rapporteur, Advisory Committee

The link between torture and corruption in prisons

Milos Jankovic, Subcommittee for the Prevention of Torture

Corruption in prisons – experience in practice

Sharon Critoph, Independent Consultant

Possible strategies of the Human Rights Council

Gareth Sweeney, Transparency International

Concluding remarks

H.E. Ambassador Thomas Hajnoczi,
Permanent Representative of Austria to the UN

Moderated by: Andrea Huber, Penal Reform International